When you have a mammogram and fill out our questionnaire, you have a chance to be part of life saving cancer research.

The Vermont Mammography Registry is part of the Vermont Breast Cancer Surveillance System and a partner of the nationwide Breast Cancer Surveillance Consortium (BCSC). Together, we collaborate with leading scientists from across the country to study breast cancer screening and diagnosis. Through this partnership, we can study information about breast health and mammograms from millions of women. And the more women we study, the better our chances of finding new and better ways to prevent and diagnose breast cancer.

If you've had a mammogram at any participating Vermont Mammography Registry facility, you may already be a partner in this life saving research! Each time you come in for a mammogram the information you provide in your health questionnaire gives you a chance to join the millions of women who opt to share this vital information for breast cancer research.

More Than 9 Million Mammograms

The Vermont Mammography Registry (VMR) and our research partners now have information on more than 9.6 million mammograms to include in our research. This vast database of mammograms has contributed to hundreds of published studies on breast cancer screening, with topics including:

- The development of a new predictive model for breast cancer risk using clinical factors and breast density
- Criteria used to identify women at risk of developing breast cancer between mammograms
- Changes in breast cancer screening rates in Vermont

These studies and more have served as a resource to guide health care policy and breast cancer screening guidelines nationwide. Your contributions to our research make this possible!

In addition to this important research, VMR also keeps performance statistics of each participating screening facility in Vermont for quality assurance. This ensures you receive the best care possible.
