THE NOCTURNISTS STORIES FROM A PANDEMIC: NEW WORLD

Friends,

Today, we are proud to have published "New World," the first episode of our new special podcast series, "The Nocturnists: Stories From A Pandemic," which features selected clips from your audio diaries.

We are making this for you.

We hope these episodes bring you a feeling of togetherness, as they do for us.

To date, over 150 healthcare workers across the country have signed up to participate in the audio diary project. If you are interested in adding your voice, click here. If you can think of someone who might bring a unique perspective to the project, please refer them to our sign-up form.

Lastly: We have decided that the score for this new podcast series will be entirely comprised of audio that you send us. For example, the "New World" episode ends with the sound of a doctor playing violin at home, while on quarantine.

So, to help us score the podcast, we ask that you send us organic "soundscape" clips (at least 30 seconds) of your COVID-19 life, along with a clip of your voice explaining the context. To do this, fill out the short form here and specify that you want to send a "single audio clip."

Examples:

You playing a musical instrument.

You singing or humming.

Sounds from your kitchen.

Sounds of your children.

Sounds from the hospital or ICU, e.g. ventilator beeps/melodies.

Cheers/howls from your neighborhood.

Anything else! Be creative.

Your stories matter.

You are not alone.

We are listening.
