STORIES FROM A PANDEMIC

PART 1 FINALE

Friends,

On Tuesday, we released "Mourning," the season finale of Part 1 of our "Stories from a Pandemic" series. Each clip from the episode has been added to our interactive story map, which shows the geographic breadth of your voices.

We are already brainstorming ideas for Part 2 of this series. If you have any thoughts or suggestions, please write us at thenocturnists@gmail.com.
Today I'm feeling immensely proud of our tiny team, who produced this series SNL style: in real time, based on the events of the previous week. I'm especially proud of the fiercely devoted Adelaide Papazoglou, who stayed up all night on Monday stitching together disparate audio clips of our audio diarists humming along to Leonard Cohen's Hallelujah (including harmonies!), to comprise a collective moment of musical memorial. A beast of a job, but totally worth it.

Some exciting news on the academic medicine front: The Society for General Internal Medicine (SGIM) has begun to recognize medical podcasts as "digital scholarship." So if our show brought you comfort and meaning during this difficult time, please consider nominating our Pandemic Series, or any of our other episodes, for excellence in digital scholarship for SGIM 2020.

Lastly, we wanted to remind you about our new audio documentary project, Black Voices in Healthcare, which will be hosted by physician Ashley McMullen, and executive produced by physician Kimberly Manning, both Black leaders in the medical humanities. As of this writing, close to 100 Black healthcare workers have signed up to participate -- and we're hoping for more! So please spread the word among your personal and professional networks.

That's all for now.

-Emily and The Nocturnists Team

Other important links:
Visit our website here.
Subscribe and listen to our podcast here.
Donate to The Nocturnists here.
Follow us on Twitter and Instagram.

THANK YOU TO OUR SPONSORS
The Nocturnists is made possible with the support of the California Medical Association, an organization that works tirelessly to make sure the doctor-patient relationship remains at the center of medicine. You can learn more about them at cmadocs.org.

THANK YOU TO OUR SPONSORS

Our Pandemic series is made possible with the support of the Betty and Gordon Moore Foundation, an organization that promotes high-quality patient care, and projects that preserve the character of the San Francisco Bay Area. You can learn more about them at moore.org.

WANT TO BECOME A SPONSOR?

Do you want to support the growth of The Nocturnists podcast?

Do you want to support the wellness of healthcare workers through storytelling?

Contact us to learn about sponsorship opportunities.
With love,
The Nocturnists Team