

Subject: CiM resources: Interviewing for residency during a pandemic

Dear Colleagues,

Please forward the below email to your advisors and students applying for residency this cycle (includes link to this week's Virtual Residency Interview webinar recording).

Thank you,

Irena Tartakovsky, M.D., M.S.
Director, Constituent Engagement
Association of American Medical Colleges

---

Dear residency applicants,

As we all know, residency interviews for the 2021 residency application cycle will look significantly different from previous years. But some tactics for interviewing smart are the same and even more important. And they all boil down to preparation and demonstrating your strong interest. CiM can help!

Earlier this week, Careers in Medicine hosted a webinar, "Preparing for Virtual Residency Interviews", which featured two program directors, a resident, and CiM and AAMC resources. View the recording on the CiM website or directly here.

In addition, the CiM website has information and advice to help you:

- Speak expertly, confidently, and on-the-fly about any aspect of yourself, your CV and life experiences to date, and your fit with the specialty and program.
- Prepare questions that will help you assess the program.
- Display your best self in every interaction and in your online presence.
- Practice your delivery with others.
- Practice the virtual interview format.
- Capture your impressions of each program as soon as possible after the interview.
- Compare and rate your desired programs.

We hope you'll take advantage of all CiM has to offer about interviewing.

Coming soon! Resources for creating your rank order list in a pandemic.

Sincerely,
Mary

Mary K. Halicki (she/her)
Program Director, Careers in Medicine®

Association of American Medical Colleges
655 K St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20001
T (202) 741-5493 F (202) 828-0659
E mhalicki@aamc.org
www.aamc.org/cim

Tomorrow's Doctors, Tomorrow's Cures®