

In partnership with the Family and Child Health Division at the Vermont Department of Health (VDH)

The Perinatal Quality Collaborative Vermont is Recruiting Patient and Family Advisors

WHO WE ARE AND WHAT WE DO

The Vermont Child Health Improvement Program Perinatal Quality Collaborative (VCHIP PQC) implements projects that impact pregnant and postpartum people, infants, and their families.

This year the PQC-VT is launching a Perinatal Advisory Committee. This committee will bring patient and family's point of views on issues that impact pregnant and postpartum people.

What do patient and family advisors do?

- Share their lived experiences.
- Provide feedback on policies and programs.
- Review health-related informational materials.
- Participate in meetings with UVM faculty, PQC-VT staff, and health care professionals.

Why should you be a patient and family advisor?

- Impact change by sharing your insights with leaders and health care professional teams.
- Learn about family and child health issues.
- Help fill the gap between patients/families and the health care teams.

Who are we looking for?

Patient or family member with pregnancy and/or birth experience within the last 5 years.

Quote from Current Advisor

“The reason that I like being a parent advisor for VCHIP is because it gives me a platform for my voice to be heard to make actual changes and help people. Being a part of VCHIP has helped show me that it is possible to take something that was a terrible experience and change it into something that can help others. I love it!”

Learn more about being a PAF advisor.

Scan the code